Read the story

1 I’m fourteen and a half. My family always forgets the half. Last Friday, Dad drove us to Grandpa’s house. Ben, who’s eleven, took one window seat. Daniel took the other. He’s seventeen and has a driver’s license. I got the middle seat again.

2 Ben wanted my phone. “Be patient,” Dad said. “You’re older.” I handed it over. Up ahead, I saw the turn for the football field. “There’s a shorter way past the field,” I began. “Hang on,” Daniel said. Dad listened to Daniel. Ben played his game. I watched us miss the turn.

3 On the way home, Ben put down my phone. “Where was that shorter road?” “Just past Grandpa’s gate,” I said. This time, Daniel leaned over to see.

4 “Left here?” Dad asked. I nodded. We drove past the football field. I still had the middle seat. But this time, both my brothers were looking at me.
